An Invitation

As you may know our school is involved in the Edible School Yard Project with Chef Ian Lai. Arlene Kroeker visited the school last week when Ian was making bread with Ms. Henderson's class and has sent this invitation for any parents who would like to attend this event at Trail Appliances next week:

"I write the food column for the Richmond Review and also host Life Tastes Great, a series of cooking demo/workshops. Chef Ian Lai will be our chef on Tuesday, November 7th, 7-9 p.m. at Trail Appliances on Minoru Blvd, in their beautiful demonstration kitchen. The cost is $25.00 with proceeds going to the Edible Schoolyard project. "Chicken, from head to tail" is the theme of the evening, and Ian will make everything from crispy skin to gypsy soup and everything in between, which guests will taste. Please invite the parents of your students who are involved in this project. To register they should contact Arlene at AKroeker@aol.com or 604-209-2003. Space is limited.

Thank you for your support. I believe in this project and am doing what I can to ensure that the kids get what they need in the way of tools, gloves, etc."
